Based in Amsterdam, The Netherlands

ARTIST BIOGRAPHY

Under his no service moniker, David Cornelissen showcases his finds as an avid music collector and digger. While he explores a wide variety of sounds, his dance floor selection is often rooted in the depths of psychedelic club music. Whether it's a brand new release or an obscure record from the early days of techno, anything deep, trippy, and driving will find its place in the wormhole that is a no service set. The Amsterdam-based DJ is a regular at festivals like Nachtdigital and Dekmantel. He has played at a varied list of clubs including De School (Amsterdam), Tresor (Berlin), and Opium (Vilnius), as well as festivals such as Dekmantel Festival and Lowlands. Drawing inspiration from the 1990s and 2000s rave scene, no service doesn't shy away from the smaller, rawer, and more DIY parties and spots in the landscape. While always staying true to the core elements that shape his sound, he adapts to his surroundings in a chameleonic manner. His strong love for electronic music manifests in various aspects of his life; besides his many years behind the decks, Cornelissen has been involved behind the scenes for an equal amount of time, and is currently one of the programmers at Dekmantel.
